

Expanding Ideas

Did you ever make origami fortune tellers when you were young? After creating one from a flat sheet of paper, you use your hands to pinch the four sections together either lengthways or across to reveal a second layer. Unfold this part of the layer to discover your fortune in the centre.

Fortune Teller uses the same origami as a tool for people to make, share and exchange with others. This tool can be used in consensus or divergence moments during a workshop. First, add a title to your digital template and print out copies for the people you are engaging. They can then use the guidelines at the top of the template to make the origami structure.

Outer Layer

Add initial questions such as:

- What is good?
- What could be improved?
- etc.

Second Layer

Expand your thoughts about the question asked

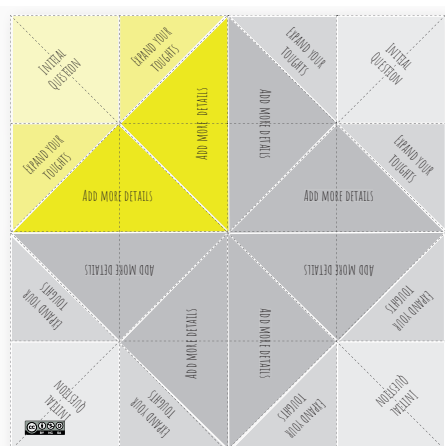

Third Layer

Add more detail on initial question

Opened Out

After you have played, open the Fortune Teller tool back out to reveal a visual record of the words.

Play

- Other uses could include:
- Creating ideas
- Contrasting good and bad scenarios. Eg healthy and unhealthy meals.
- Talking about the two key points of your favourite things. Eg the story and best bit in your four favourite books
- Why not try using coloured or origami paper?

(your title here)

1

2

3

4

5

6

7

8

9

10

11

12

13

14

15

16

17

