

Building the team

This tool is good for thinking about who should be around the table in many different situations.

Suggestions for use

Define the skills or capabilities needed in a team to achieve a specific aim or undertake a piece of work. With capabilities defined who is best placed to do what from your current team or network of contacts? Who might you need to recruit?

Work out who should be involved in conversations or a project. Who would be talking to who? Who should be working together? Do you need one big meeting, 1-1's or sub groups to make progress?

Create a 'communications chain'. How do you want messages to be communicated? What method is the best way of reaching out to that person or group? What messages do you want shared through the chain?
